Foreign Language
Subject Test Recommendations

Chinese
- Students in 4A or AP earning a B+ or better should consider taking the subject test.
- Students in 3A earning A- or better could also consider taking the subject test.
- The challenge for students in 3A is the timing of the test.
- The Chinese test is only administered in early November.
- Students who are placed in 3A after the summer may not be ready to take the test.
- If time and finances allow, students may consider taking the test multiple times.
- Students are encouraged to discuss these decisions with their teacher.

French
- Students in 3A and above earning a B+ or better should consider taking the subject test.
- If a student continues his/her study of French senior year, it is preferable to take the test in the fall of senior year to maximize exposure to the language.
- Students with strong aural skills should consider taking the exam that includes listening.
- If time and finances allow, students may consider taking the test multiple times.
- Students are encouraged to discuss these decisions with their teacher.

Latin
- Students in 3A or AP earning a B+ or better should consider taking the subject test.
- The end of 3A is an ideal time to take the test. Note that the Latin test is only administered in the winter and in the spring.
- If time and finances allow, students may consider taking the test multiple times.
- Students are encouraged to discuss these decisions with their teacher.

Spanish
- Students in 3A and or a higher advanced level course earning a B+ or better should consider taking the subject test as soon as they have completed the 3A or 4A class.
- If students move from 3A to 4 (rather than 4A), it is preferable to take the test at the end of 3A.
- Students with strong aural skills should consider taking the exam that includes listening.
- If time and finances allow, students may consider taking the test multiple times.
- Students are encouraged to discuss these decisions with their teacher.
